DebtCon is back!
Bringing together Regulators | Scientists | Institutions | Organisations | Civil society | Industry

We look forward to welcoming you at DebtCon4 in Florence on 7-8 September 2020!

Call for papers is open!
Deadline extended to 15 April 2020

The first three editions of DebtCon have established it as a unique venue for presenting economic, legal and social sciences research on sovereign debt-related issues and for discussing policy implications. The European University Institute will be hosting the 4th edition of the Interdisciplinary Sovereign Debt Research and Management Conference, on 7-8 September 2020 in Florence (Italy).

In this unique international and interdisciplinary conference, we welcome applications from economists, finance experts, historians, lawyers, political scientists, sociologists and anthropologists working in theoretical and empirical areas related to sovereign debt. Contributions from emerging scholars and junior policymakers are highly encouraged. DebtCon does not reimburse speaker travel expenses; however, selected scholars who are unable to travel to DebtCon4 for lack of funding may contact the organizers to help identify potential sources of financial support.

The objective of DebtCon4 is to discuss state-of-the-art interdisciplinary research on sovereign debt and related policy issues, and to foster interaction among academics, senior policymakers, supervisors, industry representatives and other practitioners. The conference will include both high-level roundtables, where practice, policy and research will meet, and parallel sessions, where research papers will be presented. Emerging scholars will have the opportunity to present their work in an emerging-scholars side-event.

Sovereign debt is an enduring policy challenge. Governance failures and fragmentation still plague debt and crisis management. New data gaps emerge at every turn. We hope to continue the DebtCon project and organise regularly these conferences for as long as these problems persist.

Conference Topics

We encourage original contributions from different disciplines by scholars and practitioners from around the globe, preferably fitting in the following four DebtCon4 topics:

1. Debt sustainability and sovereign vulnerabilities
   Standard debt sustainability analysis relies on relatively rough techniques for combining empirical regularities, economic insights and political economy assessments. Several factors have revealed the need to reassess the prevailing approaches to debt sustainability analysis: the role of crisis resolution institutions in redefining the value of debt; debt market developments, especially in emerging countries; a new, persistently low but not necessarily permanent negative risk-free rate context; disappointing growth prospects; heightened fiscal risks arising from climate-related shocks; a globally changing political landscape; as well as a new analysis on the value of sovereign debt.

2. Market volatility and emerging markets’ sovereign debt
   In recent times several emerging economies have improved their domestic monetary, fiscal and financial policy frameworks substantially, to the point where they often favourably compare to those of certain advanced economies. At the same time, financial account liberalization has increased volatility and therefore the vulnerability of some emerging economies. This calls for a better understanding of the determinants of sudden stops and for a reassessment of the existing policy frameworks. Have market participants and policymakers drawn the right conclusions from these developments?

3. The expanding role of new creditors’ overseas lending in global finance
   Historically, low-income countries mostly borrowed from the international financial institutions and from bilateral creditors that belong to the Paris Club. In recent years, this group of low-income countries started relying more on commercial debt by issuing bonds or borrowing from international banks, and on bilateral lenders that are not part of the Paris Club. While a diversification of funding sources can be regarded as a welcome development, commercial lenders tend to charge higher interest rates and their lending flows tend to be more procyclical than official debt flows. The recent presence of non-traditional bilateral lenders generates issues of data availability and transparency, complicates creditor coordination and in some cases raises new concerns relating to debt sustainability.

4. Revising the European framework on sovereign debt and sovereign risk
   After the euro area crisis and several years of reform standstill, the regulatory and supervisory framework underpinning Europe’s sovereign debt markets is again undergoing an intense review period. Following the introduction of single-limb collective action clauses, the European Stability Mechanism is to be given a stronger role in the assessment of sovereign solvency. Reform plans under discussion range from the (possibly radical) simplification of the Stability and Growth Pact to the introduction of (possibly risk-weighted and state-dependent) concentration charges of sovereign debt holdings. Reform plans also include the creation of a European safe asset which could take a myriad of operational forms. Policy-relevant contributions from different social science perspectives can greatly add to this analytical and policy debate.
Conference Topics

We also warmly welcome original academic or policy-relevant contributions on the topics below, including country case-studies and other related ones:

- The international political economy and governance of sovereign debt
- Changing architecture of sovereign debt management
- Central banks, sovereign-banking doom loop and sovereign debt management
- Official lending: bail-outs and bail-ins
- Credibility, commitment and sovereign default
- Debt and debt-forgiveness: human rights, civil society and political conflicts
- Historical perspectives on the law and economics of sovereign bond markets
- Sovereign debt contract design and pricing (collective action clauses, contingent sovereign debt)
- When climate meets finance: use (and abuse) of green bonds

Application procedure

To submit a paper, please send an extended abstract (or a full paper) through the form available online. Abstract submission deadline has been extended to 15 April 2020!

The receipt of all proposals will be acknowledged automatically right away (do check your spam filter).

Each contribution should also indicate preference for being included in a policy-academic roundtable or for being presented as a research paper.

Abstracts should address one of the conference topics and may not exceed 1,500 words.

The decision of including contributions for presentation at the conference will be taken by the DebtCon4 Scientific Committee and communicated to the contributing authors by 30 May 2020.

Final contributions will be due by 30 June 2020.

Selected contributions will be eligible for short-video recordings organised by the Florence School of Banking and Finance.

More information about the application procedure can be found here https://fbf.eui.eu/debtcon4

Host

The European University Institute (EUI) is a unique international centre for doctorate and post-doctorate studies and research, situated in the Tuscan hills overlooking Florence. Since its founding in 1972 by the six original members of the then European Communities, the EUI has earned a reputation as a leading international academic institution with a European focus. The four departments – Economics, History and Civilization, Law, and Political and Social Sciences – host scholars from more than 60 countries, studying for the Institution's doctorate or the one-year master in law. Furthermore, the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies (RSCAS) focuses on inter-disciplinary, comparative and policy research on the major issues affecting European societies, while the Max Weber Programme for Post-doctoral Studies prepares fellows for a career in academia. The School of Transnational Governance, established in 2017, aims to deliver teaching and high level training on the concepts, methods and techniques of transnational governance.

Venue

Villa Salviati is a masterpiece of Italian architecture. Built in the 15th century on the hills overlooking Florence, it was the home of the Salviati family, wealthy wool merchants and bankers, who were closely connected to the Medici that held great power and influence in the city. In parallel with the growth of their family fortune, the Villa was continuously expanded during the following centuries: additions include a grotto, made up of frescoes and elaborate stonework that hark back to an era of affluence, monumental stables, and a formal Italian Renaissance garden. The Villa's main body is surrounded by a 10-hectares park, with spectacular views on Florence's main landmarks.

Villa Salviati is now an integral part of the EUI campus. It houses the Department of Law, the Department of History and the Academy of European Law. Furthermore, it is home to the Historical Archives of the European Union, which preserve and make accessible for research the archives deposited by EU institutions, as well as private individuals, movements and international organizations involved in the European integration process.
